

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON

MARCOS A. MANUEL,

Plaintiff,

v.

KRISTI McGOWAN, et al.,

Defendants.

NO: 12-CV-5108-TOR

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANTS'
MOTION TO DISMISS

BEFORE THE COURT is Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim (ECF No. 21). This matter was submitted for consideration without oral argument. The Court has reviewed the briefing and the record and files herein, and is fully informed.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Marcos A. Manuel ("Plaintiff"), proceeding pro se and in forma pauperis, alleges that Defendants violated his Fourteenth Amendment right to equal protection by removing him from a prison work camp and by denying him

1 access to prison educational and vocational programs based upon the fact that he is 2 subject to an Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) detainer.

3 FACTS

4 In January 2012, Plaintiff was removed from a prison work camp at the 5 Coyote Ridge Correctional Center and placed in a higher custody facility due to the 6 fact that he had been placed on an ICE detainer. ECF No. 8-1. In August 2012, 7 Plaintiff filed a Complaint alleging violations of his civil rights under 42 U.S.C. §
8 1983. ECF No. 1. Plaintiff subsequently amended his Complaint on November 9 14, 2012, in response to the Court’s order to amend or voluntarily dismiss. ECF 10 No. 8-1. In his Amended Complaint, Plaintiff alleges that his removal from the 11 work camp, as well as his ineligibility to participate in educational and vocational 12 programs, violates his right to equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment.

13 DISCUSSION

14 A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim tests the legal sufficiency of 15 the plaintiff’s claims. Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 729, 732 (9th Cir. 2001). To 16 withstand dismissal, a complaint must contain “enough facts to state a claim to 17 relief that is plausible on its face.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 18 (2007). “Naked assertion[s],” “labels and conclusions,” or “formulaic recitation[s] 19 of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Id. at 555, 557. “A claim has 20 facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to

1 draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct
2 alleged.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). While a plaintiff need not 3 establish a probability of success on the merits, he or she must demonstrate “more 4 than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id.

5 A complaint must also contain a “short and plain statement of the claim 6 showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2). This 7 standard “does not require detailed factual allegations, but it demands more than an 8 unadorned, the defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 9 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). In assessing whether Rule 8(a)(2) has 10 been satisfied, a court must first identify the elements of the plaintiff’s claim(s) and 11 then determine whether those elements could be proven on the facts pled. The 12 court should generally draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff’s favor, see 13 Sheppard v. David Evans and Assocs., 694 F.3d 1045, 1051 (9th Cir. 2012), but it 14 need not accept “naked assertions devoid of further factual enhancement.” Iqbal, 15 556 U.S. at 678 (internal quotations and citation omitted).

16 In ruling upon a motion to dismiss, a court must accept all factual allegations 17 in the complaint as true and construe the pleadings in the light most favorable to 18 the party opposing the motion. Sprewell v. Golden State Warriors, 266 F.3d 979, 19 988 (9th Cir. 2001). The court may disregard allegations that are contradicted by 20 matters properly subject to judicial notice or by exhibit. Id. The court may also

1 disregard conclusory allegations and arguments which are not supported by 2 reasonable deductions and inferences. Id.

3 The Ninth Circuit has repeatedly instructed district courts to “grant leave to 4 amend even if no request to amend the pleading was made, unless ... the pleading 5 could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts.” Lopez v. Smith, 203 6 F.3d 1122, 1130 (9th Cir. 2000). The standard for granting leave to amend is 7 generous—the court “should freely give leave when justice so requires.” Fed. R.
8 Civ. P. 15(a)(2). In determining whether leave to amend is appropriate, a court 9 must consider the following five factors: bad faith, undue delay, prejudice to the 10 opposing party, futility of amendment, and whether the plaintiff has previously 11 amended the complaint. United States v. Corinthian Colleges, 655 F.3d 984, 995
12 (9th Cir. 2011).

13 A. Alleged Equal Protection Violations

14 The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment requires state 15 actors to treat all similarly situated people equally. Shakur v. Schriro, 514 F.3d 16 878, 891 (9th Cir. 2008). To prevail on an equal protection claim under 42 U.S.C.
17 § 1983, a plaintiff must prove that the defendant acted with an intent or purpose to 18 discriminate based upon the plaintiff’s membership in a protected class. Furnace 19 v. Sullivan, 705 F.3d 1021, 1030 (9th Cir. 2013). The first steps in analyzing such 20

1 a claim are to identify the basis of the classification and to determine what level of 2 scrutiny applies. Id.

3 Plaintiff alleges that Defendants discriminated against him on the basis of 4 his ICE detainer status. ECF No. 8-1. Prisoners subject to immigration detainers
5 are not a protected class. McLean v. Crabtree, 173 F.3d 1176, 1185-86 (9th Cir.
6 1999) (en banc), cert. denied 528 U.S. 1086; see also Gallegos-Hernandez v.
7 United States, 688 F.3d 190, 196 (5th Cir. 2012). As a result, the DOC's 8 classification scheme is subject to rational basis review. McLean, 173 F.3d at 9 1186. "A government policy is valid under the rational basis test so long as it is 10 rationally related to a legitimate government interest." Id.

11 Defendants assert that the DOC's policy of restricting offenders with ICE 12 detainers from work camp placements and various vocational and educational 13 programs is rationally related to its legitimate interest in preventing offenders from 14 escaping. ECF No. 21 at 6. The Court agrees. The Ninth Circuit has recognized 15 that preventing offenders with immigration detainers from escaping custody is a 16 legitimate penological interest. McLean, 173 F.3d at 1186. That interest is 17 rationally served by precluding such offenders from being held at less secure work 18 camp facilities and from participating in vocational and educational programs. See 19 id.; Saldivar v. United States, 2013 WL 5275620 at *2 (S.D. Cal. 2013) 20 (unpublished) (noting that "a number of district courts have . . . found that policies

1 preventing alien prisoners from participating in certain pre-release programs are 2 also justified because the purpose of the program—helping prisoners reenter the 3 community after serving their sentence—is not advanced in the case of prisoners
4 who will be deported upon release”); Rendon-Inzunza v. United States, 2010 WL
5 3076271 at *1 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (unpublished) (“It is not an equal protection 6 violation to allow United States citizen-inmates, who must re-enter domestic 7 society, to participate in rehabilitative or other programs while denying that 8 privilege to deportable aliens.”); Zepeda Duarte v. Washington, 2010 WL 3522514 9 at *5 (E.D. Wash. 2010) (unpublished) (“An outstanding detainer creates an 10 uncertainty that obstructs [the] purpose of programs of prisoner education and 11 rehabilitation . . . [thus,] there is a rational[] basis for excluding those who will be 12 sent out of the country after the term of their sentence from reformative 13 programs.”). Thus, the Court finds that Plaintiff has failed to state a cognizable 14 equal protection claim.

15 B. Qualified Immunity

16 Defendants have also moved for dismissal on qualified immunity grounds.
17 Qualified immunity shields government actors from civil damages unless their 18 conduct violates “clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a 19 reasonable person would have known.” Pearson v. Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 231 20 (2009). In evaluating a state actor’s assertion of qualified immunity, a court must

1 determine (1) whether the facts, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, 2 show that the defendant's conduct violated a constitutional right; and (2) whether 3 the right was clearly established at the time of the alleged violation such that a 4 reasonable person in the defendant's position would have understood that his 5 actions violated that right. Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 201-02 (2001). If the 6 answer to either inquiry is "no," then the defendant is entitled to qualified 7 immunity and may not be held personally liable for his or her conduct. Glenn v.
8 Washington Cnty., 673 F.3d 864, 870 (9th Cir. 2011).

9 As discussed above, Plaintiff has failed to sufficiently allege a violation of 10 his Fourteenth Amendment right to equal protection. Assuming for the sake of 11 argument that Plaintiff could establish such a violation, however, the state of the 12 law was not sufficiently clear to have put Defendants on notice that their actions 13 were unlawful. Under the Ninth Circuit's decision in McLean, a corrections 14 official in any of the Defendants' positions could reasonably have believed that 15 classifying an offender with an ICE detainer as ineligible for work camp and 16 educational and vocational programs was lawful. Accordingly, Defendants are 17 entitled to qualified immunity.

1 C. Leave to Amend

2 In light of its rulings above, the Court finds that granting Plaintiff leave to 3 amend would be futile. Thus, Plaintiff's Amended Complaint will be dismissed 4 with prejudice.

5 D. Revocation of In Forma Pauperis Status

6 Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3), "[a]n appeal may not be taken in forma 7 pauperis if the trial court certifies in writing that it is not taken in good faith." The 8 good faith standard is an objective one, and good faith is demonstrated when an 9 individual "seeks appellate review of any issue not frivolous." See Coppedge v.
10 United States, 369 U.S. 438, 445 (1962). For purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 1915, an 11 appeal is frivolous if it lacks any arguable basis in law or fact. Neitzke v. Williams, 12 490 U.S. 319, 325 (1989).

13 The Court finds that any appeal of this Order would not be taken in good 14 faith and would lack any arguable basis in law or fact. Accordingly, the Court 15 hereby revokes Plaintiff's in forma pauperis status.

16 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

- 17 1. Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim (ECF No. 21)
18 is GRANTED. Plaintiff's Amended Complaint (ECF No. 8) is 19 DISMISSED with prejudice.

1 2. The Court certifies pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3) that any appeal of 2 this Order would not be taken in good faith and would lack any arguable 3 basis in law or fact. Plaintiff's in forma pauperis status is hereby 4 revoked.

5 The District Court Executive is hereby directed to enter this Order, provide 6 copies to Plaintiff and counsel, and CLOSE the file.

7 DATED October 15, 2013.
